Small Bauhaus-style enamel light fixture with stepped dome

€180 + tax

This really is our bestseller since it can be used in so many different settings. Accordingly, we always try to ensure we have large quantities of it in stock. Its design was taken straight from the Bauhaus and remained unchanged when it was manufactured for two decades after the foundation of East Germany by a whole raft of nationalized companies owing to the lack of new machines. These lights were especially used by the East German railways and on collective farms. They feature an enamelled shade which is black on the outside and white inside. The junction box is made of Bakelite. Fitted with a socket for E27 bulbs, these lights are available in three different sizes.
